

The BEPS Monitoring Group is a network of tax researchers and specialists around the world, independent of business and governments. It was established in 2013, sponsored by tax justice organizations, concerned especially with the effects of international taxation on development. Members participate in the Group as individuals, not as representatives of any organization. We now have over 50 members from more than twenty countries, from Argentina and China to Kenya, Turkey and Zambia, and including twelve EU Member States. Our aim is to produce reports and briefings relating to the reform of the international system for the taxation of transnational corporations, and participate in public debates on these issues.
